

The following 77,413 citizens (listed by name and city in the spreadsheet which follows) signed the attached letter to President Obama, expressing concern over the DOE's LNG export process.

Dear President Obama,

I am extremely concerned that the Department of Energy is not looking at the full effects of exporting liquefied natural gas as they decide how to move forward on LNG export facilities.

Moving forward with the natural gas industry's plan to export this fuel would create problems nationwide, especially an increase in hydraulic fracturing or "fracking" needed to supply this gas. While the gas industry profits, local communities are often left to deal with such consequences as poisoned drinking water, devastated coasts, and extreme air pollution. The fracking process is also a major source of global warming pollution, and the massive super-cooling process needed to create liquefied natural gas for export uses an incredible amount of energy, creating even more climate-disrupting pollution.

Right now, DOE's study is moving forward without taking these serious consequences into account. We need to look closely at the public health and environmental risks associated with exporting LNG, before it's too late.
